Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from kidney ills, should find comforting words in the following statement.

C. E. Bradford, prop. of laundry, Main St., Norway, says: "Sometimes I had a dull pain through the small of my back, together with a tired feeling. I couldn't rest well. When a friend advised me to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at F. P. Stone's Drug Store. After I used two boxes, the pains and other symptoms disappeared and there was a great improvement in every way. I have had no trouble since." (Statement given April 30, 1912.)

On June 6, 1916, Mr. Bradford added: "I retain my confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills, as it hasn't been necessary for me to use a kidney medicine since I took them."

TUNE, "AMERICA"

Oh, Wilson, 'tis for thee,
From country's best free,
And may it always be,
Land of liberty and
And from the trusts be free,
For ever more.

Of course it's up to you
This country to pull through,
The mire it's in.
And if perchance you fall,
They'll always tell tale,
In every need and dale,
For ever more.

Thank you for what's been done,
The Democrats have won,
And we are glad.
Long may our land be freed
From "Grand Old Party" greed,
And every one succeed
For ever more.

Mrs. John J. Murphy, South Paris.

WHEN THE SNOW COMES DOWN

Picture Scene

Started deer in mute surprise,
Head erect, and stary eyes,
Through the forest and the vale,
Stealthy hunter on his trail.

Turn O hunter, turn thee back!
Why so eager on my track?
Still the snow comes down.

Falling from the region high,
Falling gently from the sky,
Softly falling, not as rain,
Mantling down and plain.

And the snow comes down
Turn O hunter, turn thee back!
Why so eager on my track?
Still the snow comes down.

Falling from the region high,
Falling gently from the sky,
Softly falling, not as rain,
Mantling down and plain.

And the snow comes down
Turn O hunter, turn thee back!
Why so eager on my track?
Still the snow comes down.

Falling from the region high,
Falling gently from the sky,

REPLY TO G. C. EAMES

W. W. Maxim of South Paris makes reply to G. C. Eames' letter:

It seems that Mr. Eames took the impression that I placed on a level the four teachers mentioned in my communication of Nov. 10, or rather he placed them in the same class. The fact that they were mentioned in the same communication does not follow that they were in the same class.

They were in separate classes, each one entirely unlike the others. Should any one attempt to class them together, probably Billy Sunday would feel as bad about it as Mr. Eames would. Mrs. Eddy did not say enough about the devil to suit Billy and she wouldn't fancy his wholesale slaughter of the King's English.

Christ was a teacher of the people when on earth and taught in the synagogues of Jerusalem. There were other teachers there of different sects among the Jews, but no one thought of classing them with Him. They all agreed that He "spoke as never man spoke before!"

A teacher of music and a teacher of oratory might be mentioned in the same newspaper article, but that would not place them in the same class. The teacher of oratory might not know anything about the theory of written music whatever.

That Mrs. Eddy was the founder or discoverer of the present system of Christian Science is generally understood and needs no comment. Students and practitioners of Christian Science have in some instances been accused

F. H. NOYES CO.
NORWAY, SOUTH PARISHave You Made a Will?

Do you realize that if you do not dispose of your property by will your estate may be disposed of by law very differently from the way you would wish? The law respecting estates for which no will has been made, can of course take no account of the special personal needs of each beneficiary.

Perhaps one of your heirs may not be well qualified to care for his property, and it should be placed in trust for him; or, perhaps circumstances may make it advisable that one heir should receive a larger share than the others; or, that the property should be given to him in a different form from that given to others. But, unless a will is made, each heir must share the property in accordance with the rigid requirements of the law.

When you make your will, why not assure efficient and economical management of your estate by appointing The Norway National Bank of Norway, Maine, as executor and trustee? The Bank has all the essential qualifications of a competent trustee, including assured existence throughout generations of beneficiaries. It has many qualifications which no individual trustee can possess. Moreover, the cost of its service is no greater than that of an individual trustee.

Twenty-Eight Years Ago This Week Tommy Thayer, Will Twombly and Will Record fell through the ice while skating on the bog Friday afternoon and came near being drowned.

M. L. Kimball paid his election bet last Thursday afternoon by wheeling Jesse W. Warren from the Advertiser office to Dunforth street and back. Mr. Kimball has had a lame arm which accounts for his not paying the debt sooner. Intentions of marriage have been entered in the town clerk's office as follows: Isaac P. Cobb of Norway and Eliza A. Trade of York, Me. Timothy L. Heath of Norway and Abbie A. Noyes of Greenfield, John H. Russell of Worcester, Mass., and Annie G. Witt of Norway.

The roof of C. H. Braden's house on Pike's Hill caught fire near the chimney last Sunday. All the folks were away except Miss Flora E. Morse when the fire was discovered. What do you suppose she did? Did she holle, run for the neighbors or faint? Not a bit of it. She got a long ladder and put it up on the gable end of the house and took a pail of water and crawled along the ridgepole to the chimney and put out the fire.

Rev. T. M. Beadenkoff is pastor at North Waterford.

About this time in the year some young people as well as older ones, get married. They should bear in mind that we have a good line of wedding cards in stock and can print them at short notice. The cost ranges from $1.50 per 50 to $4.50 according to style and quality. Orders by mail receive prompt attention. We are doing the same kind of work now. Send in your order early and avoid the rush.

A MOVE TO PENSION MINISTERS

"The pension habit has taken possession of the minds of the American people," declared the Rev. Joseph B. Hingelley, D. D., Chicago, Ill., Corresponding Secretary of the Board of the General Claimants of the Methodist Episcopal Church. "Railroads, banks, telegraph companies, express companies, manufacturing establishments, schools, states and cities are providing for the old age of employees; not as a charity, but impelled by the higher law of the eternally just. The clergyman who went out to preach righteousness on pitiful pay are the last to share in the results of principles which they enunciated, and it is delightful to know that the conscience of thoughtful Christians has been aroused and that a determination exists to provide reasonably for the old age of the ministers."

"All the motives which are back of other pension systems apply to a retiring competency for the old age of ministers. Railroads justify the millions they expend in pensions on the ground of higher efficiency. States justify mothers' and children's pensions on the ground of economy, believing that the mother can best rear her own children and that to provide for them in the mother's home is cheaper for the state than the maintaining of great institutions, which break the family ties, and tend to make of the children as they grow up untrained, a liability instead of an asset, to the state. Educational institutions believe that better work and clearer-headed men is to be obtained when the scholar can devote his time and talent to his task and can invest his earnings in his own better equipment, because the school has provided for the rainy day. Motives of higher altruism run through all these plans and the spirit of Christly care for others."

"The minister is singled out among all as the man who engages in his work not to earn a living nor to gain a competency or wealth. His is a vicarious life. He seeks to serve. Consecrated laymen who believe in Christ and His cause tell the minister that if he will devote his life and work to the good of Christ's Kingdom, they will provide a living for himself and family. On their call and promises he makes a lifetime consecration and lifelong vows. Christian laymen are waking up to the fact that a life of consecration and work on the part of the preacher involves a life support, and that retirement does not release either the minister or the layman from his contractual vows. As Dr. Cooper of Boston said to the laymen, 'You took us for life; then we go through.' The Church is responding to this challenge."

"Any motive that would apply to any other form of pension applies with greater force to the problem of ministerial pensions. Laymen want a more efficient ministry and to secure it are ready to provide for the old age of faithful preachers. They want a more intelligent ministry and so are ready to protect the minister from disability or old age by providing for him a retiring competency; and they ask that he invest his pitiful little savings in himself and his books in order that he may be more intelligent and thereby more effective. Laymen are beginning to exalt the ministry, so that to their children it may appear indeed to be a call from God and that their sons may not be repelled from the holy calling by visions of tears, old age and penury. Laymen know that the minister is illy paid during life and in part compensation for this fact are determined to see that his old age at least shall be secured. Laymen believe in such words as duty, and righteousness and obligation and only need to be reminded."

"Look Pa, How 'Gets-It' Works!"

Lifts Your Corn Right Off. Never Fails.

"Ever in your life see a corn come out like that? Look at the true skin underneath—smooth as the palm of your hand!"

Well Now, Look at That! Off Comes That Pesky Corn as Sick as a Whistle.

The earth is blessed with the one, simple, painless, never-failing remedy that makes millions of corn-pesed people happy, and that's "GETS-IT". Apply it in 3 seconds. It dries. Some people rub and dig at their corns with knives and razors—wrap their toes in packages with bandages or sit in a tub, make them red and raw with salves. Nothing like this with "GETS-IT". Your corn loosens—you lift it off. There's nothing to press on the corn, or hurt. Angels couldn't ask for more. Try it tonight on any corn, callus or wart. "GETS-IT" is sold and recommended by druggists everywhere. 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in Norway and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by F. P. Stone.

HIS FRIEND HURT; HE HELPED HIM

Injured Man Laughed When Simple Treatment Was Suggested, But He Thanked His Comrade Later.

Once upon a time word came to Henry A. Voehl, of Fairfield, N. J., that a close friend had been injured, and full of anxiety he visited the afflicted man, who was suffering from a sprained ankle.

"It was so bad that the leg had turned black," said Mr. Voehl in relating the story. "I told him I would have him out in a week and he laughed at me. But I took him a bottle of Sloan's Liniment, that night he put some on and noticed the ankle felt better. I told him to use it every day, and in three days his ankle was practically well. In four days he was working. He glad admits that Sloan's Liniment put him on his feet."

Sloan's Liniment can be obtained at all drug stores, 25c, 50c, and $1.00.

When the Feet Burn

When you feel that you cannot take another step because of the awful burning, painful sensation in your feet, get a bottle of good old reliable Minard's Liniment. In a few minutes you will know why everybody recommends Minard's Liniment for poor, aching, sore feet. It reduces the inflammation that causes the itching, burning and swelling. It helps the blood to circulate and soothes and cools—and does not stain, burn or blister. It gives relief quickly because of its healing, antiseptic properties and frees you from foot misery.

Everyday Local Sights, Thoughts and Expressions

GATHERED TO FILL UP SPACE

Have you seen the color of the Morrill Fuller house? Look at it!

Louis Gilbert's sign needs painting. I think I've spoke about this before.

Elgin Greenleaf is telling of catching those big ones "right in his dooryard."

"Wazemanawee Campfire Girls are active," and I wonder who helps mother wash and wipe dishes?

Jim True has 100 cork-beetle-bug-bass flies for next summer's campaign and more are in the making.

Hudson car license No. 28684 bothers me and I'm thinking of sending to Augusta to find out who owns the car.

Shortie Cook has driven Judge Whitman to the woods. Ed Cummings took him there in an auto the other afternoon.

Walter Luck owes me a ten cent cigar. I can't look on those prettily decorated windows without being reminded of it.

Ed Thomas is doing two men's work each day. He has got his son with him and he attracts the girls which is bother-some.

Mrs. Will Leavitt brings in 14 eggs a day and Oscar Bennett gets 13 eggs besides delivering milk each day. They live on Orchard street.

The making new of an old building can't be did. Mrs. Helen Bartlett is trying, but it is an impossibility. I once had a spell at it and know.

Money was picked up in the street recently by Wm. C. Leavitt. The looser can have it by proving ownership. Leavitt is both lucky and honest.

Mrs. Z. L. Merchant writes poetry for Freeland Howe. Have you seen it? On the fourth page of last week's paper under the head of Music Store.

Bob Seavey has a hotel estate in Littleton, N. H. to settle. He has got the two children here and an inventory of the other property was made last week.

An everyday sight: The faithful horse unblanketed, shivering in the street, while the engine of the nearby auto is covered with robes and blankets to keep it warm.

If snow doesn't come soon the cement road-way of the N. & P. Street Railway will have to be laid over next spring. It is now carrying all the traffic and is fast wearing out.

"Edgar Dunn shot a deer with four points Monday," news item in Advertiser. I supposed they were usually shot with bullets, but Edgar is reported as putting a new kind of ammunition.

Oh! the glad tidings! Eggs almost six cents each and only 30 million dozen in cold storage. Mother has a few fresh ones she put down last June and it's now time to take them to market.

Mrs. Hugh Pendexter keeps the curtains drawn over the windows on the south side of her house all the time. I presume it's to keep me from looking in and seeing visitors and what's on the table.

Charles Bradford has a dog as well as two good boys. "Jack" came in the other morning with blood on him and you should have heard Mother and Pat Cummings talk about the bad dog down the street!

Mother Bickford (Mrs. W. K.) is going on a vacation. She is the visiting "Tavie" and other absent children and friends and may be gone several weeks. Who will care for "Bob" and Knox now? I don't know.

Frank Stone is in a peek of trouble because he can't get any of the Street Improvement 4 per cent. town bonds. The local big captains of finance have gobbled them all up and he's left. He is feeling pretty bad about it.

Col. B. F. Bradbury has invited me to visit him at Togue, Me., this winter and take in the legislative sights at the Capital. This indicates he intends leaving the Mexican Border or else he's just standing me off with a false hope.

Ex-Road Commissioner, John A. Roberts has retired to the farm. I saw him walking home the other night with an armful of bundles. Maybe his gasoline chariot is out of commission, or perhaps Thad. has taken it with him to Augusta.

Bula has made a pin cushion for office use. She is the first stenographer who ever did anything with needle and thread for the benefit of the office. Bula stands radiantly alone in her achievement and has risen a notch in my estimation.

For the life of me I'm afraid C. B. Cummings & Sons Co. will never get their new office completed. Lets see they commenced on it last July and I had planned to have them occupying it October 1st. Geo. Cullinan and the rest of the boys are not fretting, but I am.

Hi Libby paddles round on Main street these slippery days. Hope he'll not get hurt. To close his shop this winter would throw Geo. Carter, Ed. Kneeland and others out of employment.

Albert Bassett and Lill have got home from hunting and is pretty much, crippled up.

Mrs. Freeland Howe shook hands with me the other day. Haven't seen her for more than a year. She has spent a delightful winter in California since I last saw her. She wants to buy a small place with a little land for her mother and have her come here from Bangor and live close by.

There is a new kind of colic in the Advertiser office. They spell it with an "h" anyhow. Dr. C. E. Walker is authority for three kinds: "Plain colic, colic flatulency and colic in the gut." Just where the "colic" referred to in the paper fits in I can't say, but I guess it's in the proof reader!

The number of deer reported killed in last week's paper is shocking. Nearly every town has a list of those who have captured big game—one to a half dozen. This is what a local paper is for I suppose. This is the means of serving notice on friends if they call round on a visit, they will be served with venison. Farmers have more visitors just after pig-killing. Everybody knows that.

It's a sad day for any man when he becomes contented with the thoughts he is thinking and the deeds he is doing and has no desire to do larger and greater things.

That man is soon sidetracked and the whirl of business rushes by into younger and more able hands.

Is the law so please don't get bolstered up with contentment and quit advertising in the local paper.

I recently inspected the rooms of the Norway Commercial Club and was much surprised and pleased. I didn't suppose Norway had such an up-to-date place. Everything looked inviting, neat and orderly.

There is a marked difference in appearance from the old Norway Club, which occupied rooms over E. E. Bicknell's store a quarter of a century ago and was a popular evening resort of business men of that day.

It costs more however, but is better. Five dollars to join and $2.50 per quarter thereafter and sixty members is the limit.

Long may it survive. H. B. Young is the secretary.

Arthur Buswell has had some business training in the Blue store. He was an apt scholar and a good boy. He left that for farming and the milk business.

He succeeded in this.

Sometime ago he bought the Bassett studio near Tannery Bridge and has been remodeling and fitting it up in a modest way.

The first floor is used for a boot and shoe store. The upstairs for a tenement.

I suspect Arthur contemplates marrying and settling down upstairs to house keeping. I can't blame him. In so doing he will be doing just the right thing.

Bob Bickford has a lot of nice native gems for Christmas wear at the Clark Drug store, in the left hand corner as you enter the front door. Its in the place formerly occupied by Jeweler Lord. You can find it.

I got lost in that store the other evening, things have changed about since I was last there. It don't look natural. It takes young men with a hustle to make things move and look nice and prosperous. That is what it is throughout that big store.

I'm sorry Sam Record is a little under the weather and living on a diet. That's what the doctor ordered he told me and he is closely following it out.

I caught him working on his books instead of a schoolgirl and Arthur was waiting on customers and slightly complaining of being overworked.

I suggested putting on another hand and then go to it and get more business, but Arthur didn't seem to take kindly to my impudence in meddling with his affairs.

They have a great big stock and I don't like to see Sam working on books when he should set with his arms folded and smoke his pipe of peace with an eye on everybody and everything.

His time is too valuable to post the ledger and make out bills. Sure it is!

I went down street the other afternoon at the let-out hour of school. I was on the side patronized by the students. Their merry laugh and talk and jostling pleased me.

It brought to mind forty odd years ago that I was one of them and tripped along as thoughtlessly and as gayly as they did.

Of the fifty and more who passed I knew not one. I felt alone in a town in which I've lived almost 35 years. I dropped my head and muttered "Can it be, can it be!" Yes, its true, I am alone.

Herman Horne was ahead of me on the street and many scholars spoke to him and he shook hands with one and extended an invitation to call at the house and see the folks.

He is a school committee-man and I'm not. He takes interest in the schools and visits them, I have not; he is a singer and loves music, I do not; he goes to church and the societies, I do not; he puts the storm windows on his house and smiles unfretfully at the screw-holes' have changed since last spring. He has a different temperament a different makeup and sees and feels different from what I do. He hasn't become a chronic grinch—I fear I have—I feel it at any rate.

Don't be bashful in helping our local correspondents get the news. Tell 'em about it and the affair will be reported correctly. It's not a sin to help a news reporter and you will be used well, if not write us.

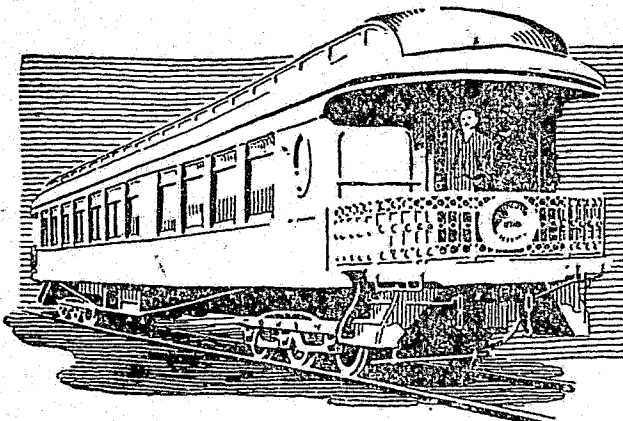

Do your Christmas shopping early and do it at home. That is the way.

Automobiles

Which Do You Prefer?

Pullman or Freight?

No one would think of riding in a freight car if he could enjoy the comfort of a big, comfortable easy riding Pullman parlor car.

So with automobiles. Most of the popular priced cars ride like freight cars. This is due to the old fashioned type of spring.

F. H. BECK, Dealer, Norway, Maine

Many manufacturers still continue to use them.

The Overland does not. The 75 B Overland has the latest type of cantilever shock absorbing springs. As a result it is one of the easiest riding cars in the world. One demonstration will prove this. $635 f. o. b. Toledo.

Slip a few Prince Albert smokes into your system!

You've heard many an earful about the Prince Albert patented process that cuts out bite and parch and lets you smoke your fill without a comeback! Stake your bank roll that it proves out every hour of the day. Prince Albert has always been sold without coupons or premiums. We prefer to give quality!

There's sport smoking a pipe or rolling your own, but you know that you've got to have the right tobacco! We tell you, Prince Albert will bang the doors wide open for you to come in on a good time firing up every little so often, without a regret!

You'll feel like your smoke past has been wasted and will be sorry you cannot back up for a fresh start.

You swing on this say-so like it was a tip to a thousand-dollar bill! It's worth that in happiness and contentment to you, to every man who knows what can be gotten out of a chummy jimmy pipe or a makin's cigarette with Prince Albert for "packing"!

THE Prince Albert tin, and in fact, every Prince Albert package, has a real message to you on the reverse side. A. You'll read: "Process patented July 30th, 1907." That means that the United States Government has granted a patent on the process by which Prince Albert is made. And by which tongue bite and throat parch are cut out! Everywhere tobacco is sold you'll find Prince Albert awaiting you in tippy red tins, 5c; tins of 10c; handsome pound and half-pound tins in humidors and in that clever crystalline glass humidor, with sponge-moistener top, that keeps the tobacco in such fine condition—always!

At The End of The Good Road

To see what really happens at the end of the good road, a public road specialist recently had observations made in different sections of the country. The observers noted many country-bound teamsters who drove two loaded wagons, hitched one behind the other, to the end of the good road, and then found it necessary to leave one wagon by the roadside to be returned for later, while all the power of their teams was devoted to hauling a single wagon over the unimproved road.

Farmers bound for the market frequently were seen to haul wood and similar products to the beginning of the good road, there dumping them, and returning for a second load. When this arrived, the two loads were consolidated and easily hauled by a single team the remaining distance to market over the improved highway.

In one section of the country where oxen are still used, teamsters were observed to bring their loads over the dirt roads with two or three yokes of oxen. When the beginning of the good roads was reached, the teamsters would unhitch the extra animals and finish their journey with the single yoke.

FRYEBOURG

Stranger Suicide
 A man apparently between 55 and 60 years of age, registering as Webster T. Eaton of Boston, but identified from a letter found in his pocket as Webster T. Eaton, committed suicide by shooting at his room in the Hotel Argonaut. Identification was established by a letter from his mother, Mrs. Hannah Weatherly of Methuen, Mass. He was a boiler maker by trade. Eastman went to the hotel Friday night and on being F. W. Thomas, the proprietor of the hotel, called him to breakfast and he answered, but did not come to the meal; also dinner the same. In the afternoon he was heard moving about his room. A woman in the hotel heard a sound like the falling of a window about three o'clock and it is believed he ended his life at that hour.

Becoming alarmed at six o'clock, constable F. R. Woodside was summoned, entered the room and found the man full of dressed, stretched on the bed, shot through the mouth with a 38 calibre revolver that lay beside him. Dr. L. Bartlett of Norway, medical examiner of Oxford County, was called in the case and reported a formal finding of suicide. An examination of the man's effects showed he had $87 in money, a watch and a few small articles in a handbag. His mother sent word for the body to be sent to Rockland, Mass.

HANOVER

Bear River Grange.
 Bear River Grange met in their hall Saturday evening, and had 35 members and one visitor present. Officers present: Flora Davis. After the minutes were read, the Finance Committee gave a report of the standing of the Grange, and it was voted to accept this report. It was also voted to send the worthy Master and wife to State Grange at Bangor.

There being a candidate in waiting, the Grange was closed in the fourth degree and reopened in the third. The candidate being instructed in this degree a recess was declared, after which the candidate was instructed in the fourth degree.

The Literary program included a reading by W. D. Kilgore and a song by Mr. and Mrs. Wight, with encore and the Chip Basket.

A gift of five dollars toward the new hall was received from Franklin Grange, and one dollar from a member of Paines Grange.

Miss Pingree, who has been caring for Mrs. Leam Roberts, returned to her home Sunday.

T. I. Roberts was in Rumford Saturday.

Olaf and Earl Davis have moved back to their farm in Hanover.

Mrs. Bennett of Rumford is working for Mrs. John McPherson.

Thirteen calves arrived in the herd of C. F. Saunders last week.

An supper and dance will be given Nov. 29 at the Grange Hall.

Sam and Duncan McPherson have gone to Andover to work for the winter.

ABBOTT'S MILLS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson and William visited at Orrin Bowker's over Sunday.

A. G. Morse was in the place looking after the business last week.

Mrs. Jose Stevens and her daughters visited her mother and brother, Clarence Farman, and wife Sunday. We were all glad to see Mrs. Stevens.

Charles Newell and son from South Paris packed apples at Orrin Bowker's last week.

While Bryant and Mr. Bennett came here to pack apples and stayed all night at Orrin Bowker's.

Freeman Stevens has closed his house for the winter and gone to board with his daughter, Mrs. Edwin Abbott.

We are all very sorry to hear of the death of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Marston.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ackley have moved to South Paris for the winter.

Ellis Abbott, son and daughter were called to Watford Saturday by the sudden death of his little grandson, Lawrence Marston.

Freeman Morse, Bradley Stevens and Harry Billings went to South Paris hunting last week. Each brought home a nice deer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson are going into the woods for Bert Davis's son.

Joe Gammon visited at Perley Delano's and went hunting.

Eake Neskanne has bought the White farm and moved there last week.

Walter Millett went deer hunting last week.

Earl Hopkins is in poor health.

There is a crew of Frenchmen living in Mr. Bartlett's house, cutting pine on the Pettigill lot. It is very large pine. It is going to be hauled to the Androscoggin River.

Mrs. Edwin Cole is gaining.

Cleve Hemingway has moved back home.

Herbert Buck has moved into Woodstock for the winter. He is hauling pine to the West Milton mill.

L. B. Hopkins has closed his house and he and his wife have gone to Portland for the winter.

EAST BROWNFIELD.

Charles Hill's Mill Burnt
 The saw mill owned by Charles Hill located at East Brownfield, was destroyed by fire at 11 o'clock Wednesday night. This is the fourth mill Mr. Hill has lost within seven years and the third mill within two years. There was no insurance on any of the mills. The cause of the fire was unknown. The total estimated loss is $4,000.
 New machinery for an electric light plant has been installed within a month. Beside the machinery lost, there was a small amount of lumber and a small quantity of grain. Mr. Hill will probably build an inexpensive building for housing plant, but it is understood the mill will not be rebuilt.

George Gallant, held since Nov. 17 on the charge of murder in connection with the death of Joseph Leonard in a lumber camp, was discharged after a preliminary hearing Saturday, at which it was shown that Leonard's death was due to natural causes.

ON REVIVALS OF RELIGION
The tendency of human life is to "partake of forbidden fruit." Lawlessness and irreligion grip the innocent and careless and lead them astray from the right, lead them away from God. No one complains about business revivals, most men take something of an interest in political revivals, and the only reason any rebel against efforts at revivals of religion is in the language of the Bible, "the heart is deceitful and desperately wicked!"

A revival of religion is simply the erring church and the lost world getting right with God. On this fact depends purity of individual character, domestic tranquility and permanence, business integrity, social safety, public welfare, and national stability. Religion after all is fundamental decency. Without it men are brutish! And you do not have to travel many miles before one can discover the ripe fruit of irreligion showing itself in lawlessness, immorality, and imbecility.

For the public to seek the mental acumen of its citizens, to see them skilled in the arts and sciences and literature, inventive and eminently successful in business enterprises, but dead to the finer instincts and moral values of life is to soon see them on the down grade to swift and certain destruction.

The good Book says, "Because sentence against an evil work is not speedily executed therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil." Because of this the real Church of God seeks to set forth and practice the truth that saves. This truth is best disclosed in Person and Atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ. There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we may be saved. And the Law is our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. The Law commands the worship in spirit and in truth of Almighty God, forbids the worship of any other whatsoever, demands chastity of speech, and a proper regard for the Lord's Day which is the substance of which the old Sabbath of rest was but the shadow. It requires, in fact assumes that parents are wise and devout and gracious according to the divine plans, and then forever commands that children shall honor and obey them. It assumes the sacredness of human life, and says in authoritative tones, "Thou shalt not kill!" This covers all the wickedness of race suicide, food embargoes and coners, prohibitive prices, outrageous rents, preventive industrial murders, war and all the rest of the killing of which sinful man is guilty. It forbids stealing, demands chastity of the inner life, the strict integrity of the outer, conserves the rights of our neighbors by forbidding false witness and evil speaking concerning them, and exposes the covetous heart to the gaze and condemnation of both God and man. It further requires that both God and man shall have an appropriate place in the throne room of the individual heart. No man can test himself by these requirements and find much within to flatter him. On the other hand, like all the worthies of the past, he will cry, "Unclean! Unclean!" and seek the Only One who can heal the leprosy of his innermost life.

This is a revival of religion. For this we pray. Even the Wall Street Journal sees no hope for the country without revival of religion. It is more necessary than any other single thing, and on this the character and permanence of all other blessings depend.—Madison Bulletin.

WEST LOVELL.
Mrs. A. K. Lofd has been visiting her niece, Mrs. Fred S. Stearns and nephew, W. S. Fox last week.

Earl R. Fox and Irving Bowley each shot a deer, Friday.

J. C. Howard of Stow visited at Alonzo Lord's last week.

John A. Fox carried his carpenter, Wm. Kingman and wife, who has been with him, to Waterford last Thursday. He has his nine-foot piazza, which extends the east and south side of his house nearly completed. Later he will have it screened in.

Oliver McAllister's house took fire Saturday, when the chimney burned out. With the assistance of his neighbors the fire was put out without much damage.

Z. McAllister, wife and Webster visited Mrs. George Chadbourne at Frank Stone's in Sweden, Saturday.

ALUMINUM DUST.
Aluminum dust or powder burns if subjected to an exceedingly high temperature.

THE NIGHT COMETH

What is more pitiful to see than an aged man or woman dependent on the grudging charity of relatives in their last years? Old age should be surrounded by cheerful society and all comforts possible. When the hands that so long ministered to their own and other's wants, grow powerless with the weakness of age, then it is they should be strongly aided by the love and care of children.

How often children seem to be anxious to shift the burden of their support from one to another. Jane's "house is small, I cannot entertain mother long," while Sarah complains of "mother's old-fashioned ways and plain speech which annoys, especially when fashionable friends call," and so on. A round is kept up until death gives relief.

The presence of an aged father or mother in the home ought to be considered as a blessing. If at all possible, they should have their own private room, and if it can be managed, let them retain some of their home belongings and be allowed to arrange them to suit their individual tastes. They will be more contented and far happier than if forced to occupy rooms filled with up-to-date furniture. The old escutcheon and high-backed armchair is preferred to the quarter-oak desk and mission chair. It is true there are cases where the aged father or mother are attended with every care and consideration, but we are sorry to say it is seldom the case except where a legacy is seen in the prospective.

If a peaceful old age is desired, it will be well to remember the advice given in one of the old Apocryphal books: "Give not thy goods to another while thou livest, give not thyself over to any; far better it is thy children should seek to thee, than that thou shouldst stand to their contests."

An old man divided his property among his children, with the provision that he was to make his home with them by turns. After his money was gone, it became apparent that his presence was not needed, even in the homes his money built. In his distress he asked the advice of a shrewd old lawyer friend, who told him to divide his property directly upon. A strong box, well secured, now accompanied him in his visits among his children. When questioned, he carelessly stated "he had a few pennies in the wall" written by Rex Beach, on Wednesday evening this week.

YOU CAN NEVER TELL
When a young lady the back of whose coat was liberally sprinkled with confetti passed along Water street Thursday evening with a young man by her side, it was only natural that the two should be the objects of many interested glances.

What seemed unaccountable was the fact that neither of the two appeared self-conscious in the slightest degree, or even aware of the curious gaze of the bystanders. So dazed were acquaintances of the couple that it did not even occur to them to join in any of the customary demonstrations or offer congratulations which were so apparently in order.

Investigation, however, revealed the fact that in this case, as in so many others, the couple took their departure from the scene of the case were these. The young lady, with her companion, had gone to call on another young lady, a prospective bride, carrying a pretty gift and also a package of confetti with which to shower the bride-to-be.

Having presented the gift and indulged in the harmless fun afforded by the confetti, the couple took their departure, unmindful of the fact that the prospective groom, who was present when the call was made had appropriated a generous share of the confetti and had scattered over the back of the donor of the present. Not until her arrival home did the young lady become aware of the reason for the curious glances.

Hazing the Freshman
Much less is heard than formerly about the custom of college and school hazing. Rarely is the trembling freshman put under the pump on frosty night. Some of the old timers rather regret this decadence. They look at it as the only way to take the conceit out of a bumptious youngster.

College and school authorities are generally against the practice. It is a commendable end to take down the conceit of a freshman. But the sophomores, the usual victims of the custom, are hardly the man for the job. He has not himself climbed so far up the hill of wisdom as he seems to think.

The freshman is really a tremulous and shrinking creature as he tries to adjust himself to a new environment. It is more often the sophomore who really needs the taking down. And college life still accomplishes that end by means quite as effective as the pump.

In Place of Whipped Cream.
Whipped cream will transform an ordinary baked apple or a piece of cake into a delectable and slightly dessert. When it is impossible to obtain it, a fairly good substitute can be made by blending one teaspoonful of cornstarch with a little sugar and adding this slowly to one cupful of rich milk. Cook the milk until it is of the consistency of heavy cream. Have the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff and gradually pour the boiling milk into it, beating all the while. When flavored it will be found to be very palatable and can easily masquerade as whipped cream.

CLEANING SILVERWARE.

Department Recommends Electrolytic Method—Simple Homemade Outfit Gives Satisfactory Results.

An easy and effective method of cleaning tarnished silverware by boiling in a clean piece of aluminum or zinc is recommended to housewives by the department as a result of studies made by its specialists in home economics. The necessary procedure is so simple that it may be followed successfully in practically any home.

The cleaning system known as the electrolytic method has been well recognized for several years.

The tarnish which occurs on silver is not due to oxidation, but is dependent entirely upon the action of sulphur. In most cases the source of the sulphur causing the tarnish is rubber, wool, foods like eggs, and the sulphur in air due to burning illuminating gas and coal. The electrolytic cleaning method depends upon the facts that this tarnish of silver sulphid is slightly soluble in the hot solution employed, and that it is broken down chemically and its silver content redeposited on the ware when the proper electrical conditions prevail. The presence of both the silver and the aluminum or zinc in the solution provides the necessary electrical conditions. Under this method, therefore, practically all the silver in the tarnish is returned to the object being cleaned. When silver polishes are used, on the other hand, all the silver in combination in the tarnish is removed.

In the cleaning method recommended by the department the necessary material is a graniteware cooking utensil deep enough to allow the silverware to be covered by the solution; a clean piece of aluminum or zinc, preferably the former; and baking or washing soda and a like amount of table salt for each quart of water, is brought to a boil in a graniteware or enameled utensil.

Aluminum or zinc is dropped in, the tarnished silverware is then immersed in the solution so that it is in contact with the sheet of aluminum or zinc. The tarnish should disappear in a few seconds. The silver object should then be removed from the solution, rinsed, and dried with a soft cloth.

Aluminum is much more satisfactory than zinc for use in this cleaning process, since it does not become coated with a layer of carbonates which would interfere with the chemical reaction. Zinc does form carbonates and, if used, must be cleaned frequently in dilute hydrochloric acid. A small sheet of aluminum may be purchased, especially for silver cleaning purposes, or a piece of an old aluminum utensil which may be used. Utensils which would later be used in cooking operations should never be employed in cleaning silverware by the electrolytic method. If very large pieces of silver are to be cleaned and a container is required larger than can be placed conveniently on the stove, the hot solution may be poured into such a vessel and the silver object then immersed. The method is most effective, however, when the solution boils during the cleaning process, and efficiency is rapidly lowered as the temperature of the solution falls below the boiling point.

The electrolytic method gives the cleaned silver a satiny finish after several cleanings. If a tarnished surface is desired, the silver must first be cleaned with a polished cloth with some abrasive polishing material such as powdered whiting. The study made by the department specialists included a comparison of the amount of silver lost when the whole tarnish was removed by polishing and when the electrolytic method was used. It was found that when whiting paste was used as an abrasive, spoons lost only one gram of silver each, approximately twenty-five times as much as when the "homemade" electrolytic method was employed.

One Cent Letter Postage

Efficiency in the post office department with a prompt readjustment of rates will permit the government to inaugurate a one cent letter rate within the next year, according to Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson.

This emphatic statement made by the postmaster general before the National Association of Postmasters of the United States Convention, indicates that the postal reform is much nearer realization than most people believe and that next winter will see radical steps taken toward this end.

In addressing the postmasters General Burleson declared that they are giving the best postal service in the world today, and that what the American farmer and business man are entitled to, for they are postal employees, is a better service to spare no expense that means greater efficiency.

"But that does not mean extravagance," said Mr. Burleson. "Where is an official who will tell me that employees are useless to the service should not be lopped off? I do not want to be head of a postal employees. I believe the government should require only a certain number of hours work, and that under sanitary and comfortable conditions, at a salary not only adequate, but generous. It is my purpose and your duty to see that all employees perform an adequate service for the money expended."

"Every dollar intelligently saved can be utilized for the improvement, development and extension of service, resulting in a reduction in postage for those served."

"Plans are being worked out for the solution of railway mail service problems. They are being solved in a way that will enable the United States to pay the railroads adequate compensation for service rendered, and pay only for service received. With this result, if next year we can make those using the second class mail service pay one-half part of what they should, we can go before congress and take the first step toward penny postage."

"The fact that this year we have a surplus of between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 demonstrates that at last the postal service is on a strong business and self-supporting basis. If we can keep doing without extravagance, we can soon inaugurate a one cent postage in this country."

This frank statement from the postmaster general substantiates declarations which have been made during the past year or two by officials of the National One Cent Letter Postage Association, which has its headquarters at Cleveland, and with economical operation of the department and a reasonable adjustment of postal rates, one cent letter postage could be inaugurated without injury to the federal government, and letter users given the benefit of a big reduction over current rates.

SMOKING MEATS

Directions For Smoking Pickled and Cured Meats On the Farm

Pickled and cured meats are smoked to aid in their preservation and to give flavor and palatability. The cresote formed by the combustion of the wood closes the pores to some extent, excluding the air, and is objectionable to insects.

House and Fuel—The smokehouse should be 8 to 10 feet high to give the best results, and of a size suited to the amount of meat likely to be smoked, 6 by 8 feet being large enough for ordinary farm use. Ample ventilation should be provided to carry off the warm air in order to prevent overheating the meat.

Small openings under the eaves or a chimney in the roof will be sufficient if arranged so as to be easily controlled. A fire pot outside of the house proper with a fine through which the smoke may be conducted to the meat chamber gives the best conditions for smoking. When this cannot well be arranged a fire may be built on the floor of the house and the meat shielded by a sheet of metal. Where the meat can be hung 6 or 7 feet above the fire this precaution need not be taken. The construction should be such as to allow the smoke to pass up freely over the meat and out of the house, though rapid circulation is at the expense of fuel.

Brick or stone houses are best, though the first cost is greater than if they are built of lumber. Large dry-goods boxes and even barrels may be made to serve as smokehouses where only small amounts of meat are to be smoked. The care of meat in such substitutes is so much more difficult and the results so much less satisfactory that a permanent place should be provided if possible.

The best fuel for smoking meats is green hickory or maple wood smothered with sawdust of the same material. Hardwood of any kind is preferable to softwood. Resinous woods should never be used, as they are likely to impart bad flavors to the product. Corncocks are the best substitute for hardwood and may be used if desired. Softwood and corncocks give off large amounts of carbon in burning, and this is deposited on the meat, making it dark in color and rank flavored. Juniper berries and fragrant woods are sometimes added to the fire to flavor the meat.

Filling the House—Meat that is to be smoked should be removed from the brine two or three days before being put in the smokehouse. If it has been cured in a strong brine, it will be best to soak the pieces in cold water over night to prevent a crust of salt from forming on the outside when drained. Washing the meat in tepid water and scrubbing clean with a brush is a good practice. The pieces should then be hung up to drain for a day or two. When drained they may be hung in the house. All should be suspended below the ventilators and should hang so that no two pieces come in contact, as this would prevent uniform smoking.

Keeping up fire—A slow fire may then be started, warming up the meat gradually. During the winter months in cold climates it is best to keep the fire going continually until the smoking is complete holding the temperature at about the same point. If the fire is allowed to die down, the meat becomes cold and the smoke does not penetrate readily. This results in heavy smoke on the outside and very little on the inner portions of the meat. During the spring months and in the summer a light fire may be started every second or third day for two weeks, the meat being allowed to hang in the smokehouse until sufficiently colored. When the fire is kept going steadily and an even temperature is maintained, 24 to 36 hours will be required to finish one lot of meat. Smoke will not penetrate frozen meat and it will be necessary to extract all frost from it before filling the house. The house should be cooled by opening the ventilators or doors. When hard and firm it may be canvassed or packed away for summer use.

What Radium Looks Like.
Radium is a metal and is described as having a white metallic lustre. It has been found only once or twice, and few people have seen it. Radium is ordinarily obtained from its ores in the form of hydrous sulphate, chloride, or bromide, and it is usually sold and used. These are all white or nearly white substances, whose appearance is no more remarkable than common salt or baking powder. Radium is found in nature in small quantities, but it is never visible to the unaided eye. It is never visible to the unaided eye. It is examined with a microscope. Ordinarily radium ore carries only a small fraction of a grain per ton of material, and radium will never be found in large quantities because it is formed by the decay of uranium, a process which is wonderfully slow, and radium itself decays and changes to other elements so rapidly that it is impossible for it to accumulate naturally in visible masses. Minerals that carry radium, however, are fairly easy to determine. One of them, pitchblende, as generally found, is a black material about as heavy as ordinary iron, but much softer. The principal radium mineral, carnotite, has a bright canary yellow color and is generally powdery.—U. S. Geological Survey Bulletin.

Birth of the Linch Collar.
The wife of a Troy, N. Y. blacksmith is said to have been the first person to have made separate collars for men's shirts. This happened in 1825 and men have been suffering ever since. Outside of inventing the separate collar the woman did the family washing. Accordingly she set herself to work making separate collars for her husband's shirts and then made enough to sell outside the home. This innovation attracted the attention of the Rev. Ebenezer Brown, a retired Methodist minister, and he, with the aid of the women of his family, went about selling collars. This was in 1829.

All the work on these early collars was done by hand, for the sewing machine had not yet been invented. In those days not more than a dozen collars a day were sold. Their name—"string collars"—was especially appropriate, for they were tied around the neck with a string of tape attached to each end of two thick, except the bands, the first separate collars were generally all linen and of two thicknesses, although some were slightly stiffened and had high points extending above the chin on either side.—Popular Science Monthly.

NORWAY ADVERTISER AN ACCEPTABLE GIFT
Very frequently we receive orders to send the Norway Advertiser as a gift and we find the custom growing rapidly with each succeeding year. As the holiday season approaches, these orders are more in evidence. So many are sent as Christmas gifts that we have a special receipt card to use for them. This card is a fancy Christmas Card and is worded as follows:

"You will receive the Norway Advertiser during the coming year, as the gift from (name of donor inserted here). Kindly accept the same, as it arrives in your home, from week to week, as an expression of esteem and good wishes on the part of the giver."

"To the sentiment thus expressed, we beg leave to add our season's greetings."

Yours respectfully,
F. W. Sanborn."

We have never known the Advertiser to be unwelcome, under such circumstances, and we have many times been assured that, of all gifts, it may be allowed to suggest, we will say that one of the places where it may be sent as a gift, is to some friend who has gone away to work for the winter, etc. A little reflection only is needed to convince one that home news would be greatly looked for. Another quite similar situation is the boy or girl away at school. These subscriptions, or any other for that matter, can be made for two, three, four, six, eight, ten months or a year (or larger) and can be so marked that they will stop at expiration of time paid for.

We are ready to give special care to these orders for gift subscriptions.

SPEED AND LEAPING POWERS OF ANIMALS
The speed with which animals can run and the height or the distance that they can leap have long been subjects of interest to naturalists. In the old days extraordinary powers were sometimes ascribed to wild animals. A book on natural history, published in England in 1804, declared that an American panther, or mountain lion, had been known to jump a distance of 100 feet. Our big cat might have done so but it must have been down a steep hillside.

Writers of a century ago were firm in the conviction that the greyhound was the fastest living animal; some maintained that he could run a mile in a minute. Modern observers, however, have found that the best hound is by no means able to keep pace with a trained race horse. Indeed the late J. A. Graham, a careful student of such matters, used to say that no living animal could outpace a modern race horse.

A first-rate horse, running his best, and not handicapped by carrying a rider, can run a mile in less than a hundred seconds. A fleet hound such as are used in coursing, can run a mile in about one minute and fifty seconds. A jack rabbit is nearly as fast, and an antelope is considerably faster. Mr. Graham thought an antelope might run a mile across the level prairie in one minute and forty or forty-five seconds.

On the other hand, Mr. Cottar, an old African hunter, thinks that Thomson's gazelle would have no trouble whatever in running away from the fastest horse, and that Grant's gazelle and the gnu are almost equally fleet.

A race horse in full stride covers twenty-five or twenty-six feet at a bound, and an English cross-country horse is said to have leaped thirty-six feet. An American white-tailed deer can jump more than thirty feet, and a stag in England that had escaped from its park cleared a fence twelve feet high in returning to the inclosure.

The pallah, a species of African antelope, is probably the greatest living high jumper. Travelers have often asserted that this beast could jump more than twenty feet high. Mr. Cottar saw a number of these antelopes leap over the tops of some small trees and then he measured the trees. They were fifteen feet high.

The animals have the curious habit of jumping over one another's backs, either when frightened or when simply playing. Youth's Companion tells us. It is an ordinary sight on an African veldt to see a herd of these antelopes jumping over one another like boys playing leapfrog. When frightened, the first impulse of a herd of pallah is to rush together; then they begin

BIG BARN DOOR SKETCHES

Purely Personal and Mostly About Myself and Early Career.

It was decided to change the Commercial Department of the Institution into a full fledged Commercial College. The business training here given had been very popular and the personal supervision and teaching of Prof. A. B. Meservy, author of Meservy's Bookkeeping, which was a popular text book throughout New England, 30 years ago. The change would require an assistant teacher and I was offered the position on the condition of my attending Eastman Business College of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and fit up for the work, including telegraphy, which was then being taught in Commercial Colleges.

This I did, after borrowing $125.00 from Simon Cate of Meredith Center, giving him my note for one year's time or less and at six per cent. interest until paid. The note was also signed by Ebenezer S. Robinson and was paid several months before the time stated.

I left New Hampshire in May 1877 and returned in July. I did not bring away a diploma, though one was made out for me. I refused to pay the extra charge of two dollars, feeling I had a better use for the money than investing in "a scrap of paper" bearing the copper-plate-like signature of H. G. Eastman, president of that great college.

I passed all the examinations up to the Banking Department at one sitting, both written and oral. Six of them, I think, thus saving about two months' time. I was reasonably familiar with the Commercial training as taught at New Hampton and "the floor-work" was nearly alike in both schools.

I remember it was a great surprise to my associates that I got by. A good number of students attended the oral examination as it got noisy about that "a kid was trying to jump the floor" and it was a feat seldom successfully accomplished.

Prof. White conducted it and seemed to enjoy asking all manner of questions in Single and Double Entry Bookkeeping. They were fair ones and easily answered, which evidently pleased him and he soon handed me several sheets of questions for a written examination, saying: "If you can do as well with these you can pass."

These were easy, too, and in less than thirty minutes they were handed into the office and I was dismissed. The spectators left at the close of the oral examination feeling I had an even chance to get into the Banking Department without "going over the floor" as it was called.

The next morning, while working in the Telegraph Department, I received a note from Prof. White saying my examination was satisfactory and that I would be admitted to the Banking Department by presenting the enclosed certificate to Prof. Christie.

This I did and joined a class due to graduate the first of August after the Fourth of July. I willingly "fell-by-the-way" and graduated with a class two weeks later. I was working with the tickers upstairs and that came hard to me. It was slow work and the Spaniard in charge would not wait for my patience and talk in an unknown tongue. I presume he did his swearing in his native language.

You must write and take twenty words a minute before you were considered competent. I could read much easier than I could write it out on paper and I found in teaching telegraphy that this was the most difficult thing to learn. To write out legibly twenty words a minute. Try it and see.

Read out of a book that number of words a minute and it was for an hour or less and you will be surprised at the poor manuscript made.

In fact until the pupil "catches on" to the knack of this kind of copying little or nothing will be done. It was easy to read what was going over the line, but difficult to put on paper. It requires a dual mental and mechanical operation. Proficiency in which comes only by continued practice.

I worked at it two hours or more each day along with the banking. If you forced a balance in the bank, and it was detected, the whole class was set back a week, or until affairs were satisfactorily straightened. The position of second bookkeeper was the most difficult and many a boy labored over time to have it correct.

I lost most the Fourth of July celebration at the Highland across the river because I couldn't balance the ledger correctly. I finally got it out and took to the figures in the book, and took some of the picnic late in the afternoon.

A few days later I was brought before the cashier (Prof. Christie) charged with forgery. The bank had gone wrong and the class was to be held up for errors made by me. I was in disgrace and the graduating class was anything but pleased, as the most of them were anxious to go home.

I strongly claimed the balance of July 3d was correct even if it did take me the greater part of the Fourth of July to get it out. I went to my room on South Hamilton street for the original figures and they were checked through and found to be right and the class was entitled to receive their diplomas as far as the Second Bookkeeper was concerned on that day.

It finally cropped out that a balance had been forced by one Darling, from Mississippi and he and his class had been gone fully ten days. It was straightened out and Prof. Christie and Gardner scanned the daily balance more carefully. Had they done this before, Darling would not have got away as they had a report of condition laid on their desk each night, which told the whole story, and to prove its accuracy required little time.

These reports were made each day by the different students in the bank and given to the cashier (a teacher), who could tell by certain addition and subtraction whether correct or not. The money used had a two per cent. value and was always redeemable at that price in the Front College Office by whose sever presented.

The boy who went into business with a capital of $1000, really invested $20 of real money, while the college had for use if it saw fit. If one hundred thousand dollars of college money was in circulation, the school had two thousand of Uncle Sam's money in its possession. No student could go through the banking department without losing as discounts and interest had to be paid and each day was called a month.

The Merchandise Department, Bank and Express offices were owned and operated by the college and the two per cent. profit made went to the school and not to the students.

I made a somewhat careful estimate of the "invisible profits" thus received and concluded it was in excess of $1,500 of genuine money per year.

To my mind this is the only sensible way of handling a make-believe college circulating medium. I think the government now forbids it under heavy penalties.

The caissons for the great bridge across the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie were being put in that summer. H. G. Eastman was mayor of the city and a busy man. He devoted little or no time to the school and was seldom seen about the college except to deliver a lecture and sign diplomas.

Vassar's College, Matt Vassar's brewery and the rolling-mills was about all the business there was in the city. Many business places on Main street were vacant and "To Rent" placards numerous.

There were less than 200 students in the school. Some years before, over two thousand boys were in attendance at the college. Every hall and some churches were occupied for business training purposes.

This was the result of Eastman's spectacular college brass band music advertising. The College Band visited nearly all the big cities and gave free open air concerts and distributed business training literature, which was carefully followed up at home offices resulting in swelling the number of students all out of proportion with school accommodation.

It was a bold advertising stroke and it paid. Everything about the college was based strictly on dollars and cents dowing into the college treasury. Eastman did much good and made big money.

In 1877 there were five teachers in the college and nine persons in the advertising office. A two horse drag load of mail matter left every few days to tell of a business education to every youth under a certain age in the United States. This was their claim. The school was well managed and did lots of good.

I was there a few years ago and two of the teachers remained and everything looked prosperous, even to the new modern brick building. The furniture in the Banking Department was the same as when I was a student. All else had changed. They are running a large school in New York City, as well as at Poughkeepsie. Mr. Eastman died many years ago and Prof. Gains married into the family and is now the head of the institution, or was at the time of which I write.

I learned some things while there. Principally the value of persistent advertising and business methods. I really believe Mr. Eastman would have gladly put a transparency over the sun, saying, "Business Education, Eastman's College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y." He did nothing by halves and was a success shouting from the house-top!

Truth compels me to state I was privately coached a little for the "floor examinations" by a student from Baltimore, named Abel, who roomed in the same building with me. He had just gone through it and gave me valuable assistance. My quick success in passing was, in measure, due to him.

I shared a room with C. E. Brown, a young fellow from Tampa, Fla., who washed his feet and cleaned the nails of his fingers and toes every night to keep clear of "tetter-worms." These pestering itches fell in Norwich in the North, but you could not make him believe it.

Most of the students signed a petition asking for a half-holiday so they might attend a circus. Nothing was heard of it until the morning of the show, when Mr. Eastman came to the college and the students were called to the big room and he appeared on the platform.

The students were always vociferous with cheers and hand-clapping whenever he put in an appearance. This demonstration he promptly waved down. The petition was in his hand and determination glinted in his eye. He promptly told the eager students that they could not go to the circus; the school would not close for a half-holiday and that he was ashamed of the petition—only five decent signatures did it contain out of a hundred or more names.

He read the names of the five students whom he said had a good looking, marked, characteristic, business signatures. They would be excused and could attend the circus if they wished, but all the others would remain and if they saw fit to adopt a good looking business-like signature, it was possible he might let them attend the next circus that came to town in the afternoon. He would at any rate consider the proficiency made in writing their names and with much directness, said:

"If any student attends the circus this afternoon, other than the five mentioned, will be expelled from the privileges of the college. You all understand this. Good day."

The boss had spoken and he retired, carrying the petition in his hand. There was no cheering, but many a boy adopted signatures which they are now using.

Others the others and here you have it:

Abraham Lincoln Said:

"The thought recurs that education—cultivated thought—can best be combined with agricultural labor, on the principle of thorough work, that careless, half-performed, slovenly work makes no place for such combination; and thorough work, again, renders sufficient the smallest quantity of ground to each man; and this, again, conforms to what must occur in a world less inclined to wars and more devoted to the arts of peace, than heretofore. Population must increase rapidly, more rapidly than any of the former times. Such community be alike independent of crowned kings, money kings, and land kings."

Albert J. Plante of Rumford, a laborer, has filed a petition as a voluntary bankrupt with the clerk of the U. S. District Court. Liabilities are listed at $567.65, of which $113 is secured. The assets valued at $100, claimed exempted. Albert Bellevue of Rumford is the attorney.

BETHEL

Community Drama

The first movement for community drama in the New England states, which is to be launched in Bethel Thanksgiving evening under the entire management of Robert L. Dempster, is of especial interest.

The recital, which marks the inauguration of the movement, will be given in J. Upson's beautiful music room. Mr. Upson's interests in civic matters in the community having led him to take up this work. Jeanette Emerson of Portland will do several dances.

Florence Hayes, formerly of Auburn, will accompany Mr. Dempster for his recitals. The first two plays to be presented are Rosalind, and the Will.

LINCOLN'S LOG CABIN

A building within a building, a little log cabin sheltered by a structure of classic outlines, was the center of national, or rather world interest, when the Lincoln Memorial building was accepted by the United States Government Sept. 4, President Wilson making the address. The building that enfolds the cabin as a most precious thing has been erected by popular subscription through the Lincoln Farm association, which raised $250,000 for the purpose by an appropriate appeal to the whole people. Fortunate it is that the cabin in which Abraham Lincoln was born has been preserved, and will be preserved for all time. It is only ten logs high to the eaves, with a rustic plaster between, while the chimney of short logs, sticks and mud stops a long way before reaching the pole, forming the apex of the roof. The cabin has been restored to its original site near Hodgenville, Ky., and near by is the unfading spring that attracted the pioneer father in choosing the spot for habitation, humble but manly, lowly in material prospects but high in free-born American courage, feeling the deep impulse of American destiny, ready to fight, and die if need be, for the right.

What Abraham Lincoln represents in American history must be profoundly interesting as long as the nation lasts, and that will be as long as the American fighting spirit lasts, a spirit that is never aggressive, but inflexible in honorably tendencies and milk-and-water philosophy. Lincoln was a man of peace, a lover of his fellow-creatures. But it never occurred to him that he could be unwilling to die for his country if its stability demanded the sacrifice. He died for it at the post of duty, where circumstances placed him. He fell at a supreme moment of the nation's victorious assertion of the principle that a government so constituted should not perish from the earth. The people discovered his fitness to lead by an instinctive intelligence as a great emergency loomed ahead, and plainly demanded the leadership of the greatest man to be found in any of the States. If he was singled out then by the inner perception of the people, why may not any coming crisis have the aid of this powerful insight? The people will not be fooled when grave peril threatens the republic, or be misled by men in whom vanity and irresolution are left in the crucible when the test is applied.

The pioneer axe was heard round the world when the cabin in which Lincoln was born was heaved in a few days from the surrounding forest.

GET THE GOOD OF COAL

When householders in New York, 200 miles nearer the mines than we, are paying $13 a ton for coal, while dealers forebore a return of the prices that peaked 1902, it is time a prudent consumer learned whether his heating plant is 90, 50 or only 10 per cent. efficient. Of the millions on millions of tons of coal that New England burns each year, no small part yields more ashes and chimney heat than comfort.

Most of us have a foolish notion that anyone can run a coal fire, be it small or big. We think that a furnace is a furnace, a choremann is a choremann. Unlike a stamp, a railway ticket or a steak coal does not look its value. Yet $10 cost, reduced to units of heat and shovel, means 25 cents for every fifty pounds. With the "high price parade" already under way at quick step and with short-ages ahead in more than one staple, we ought to be studying hard the un-American art of household thrift. Why not begin with getting the good of our coal?

Would it not be sound strategy if the furnace and heater companies should send to recent purchasers and to their old friends a set of real instructions for getting the best service from the appliances put out? We do not mean an old-time card directions, telling in general phrases what any child would know about kindling and feeding a fire. What the average householder needs is an exact account of how his particular furnace in his cellar should be managed in point of fittest fuel, in point of drafts above and beneath the firepot, with special rules of their invariably neglected balance, in point of automatic regulation, too, and all the rest.

Could not the coal men also help consumers with a clearly written booklet, telling them about kinds and grades of coal, quick and slow burning, about ash and clinker, about the kind of coal best for furnaces and about such wind exposures and with such and such degrees of possible attention? The dealers would certainly find the orders of a customer so instructed not only intelligent, but less pessimistically paid.

Maine Built Vessels

As a rule when a sailing vessel is converted into a coal barge, she is pretty likely to end her days as a barge. It is a sign, that she has outlived her usefulness as a visitor to the seven seas and must henceforth be dragged unromantically up and down the coast at the beck and call of a snorting tug. But this is not invariably true. Ships built in Maine can "come back," if occasion demands. For example, there was the good clipper ship, Rufus E. Wood, built in East Deering in 1885. She did gallant service until around 1900 when she was sold at San Francisco and converted into a barge. She has been towed about San Francisco Bay as a coal barge for 15 years or more, but somebody discovered that she was sound as a nut, still preserved her former sweet lines and had possibilities as a sailing vessel. She was, therefore, washed out and converted into a schooner and early in the present month entered into the lumber carrying trade on Puget Sound. The Wood was considered one of the fastest of the American built clippers and held the record for making the round trip under canvas between San Francisco and Nantux in 25 days.

The sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Marston in the loss of their little one, Lawrence, Jr. The baby was about a year old and until a few weeks ago was a bright active little fellow. A few weeks since he became afflicted with rickets and last week suffered an attack of measles to which he succumbed on Saturday last. Funeral services were held Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.

NEW PAPERS FROM OLD

The high cost of print paper is largely responsible for bringing into the limelight Dr. Thomas Jasperson, who is confident he has invented a process whereby old newspapers are transformed into pure white stock, to be again used for newspaper printing. The process has had an actual test, newspapers yellow with age having been converted into rolls of spotless paper and used for several issues of a Neenah newspaper. Dr. Jasperson is being besieged with inquiries from all over the country.

The process removes all ink from the old newspapers, and they are ground up, made into pulp, and run through a paper-making machine, coming out immaculate whiter than the original paper. Dr. Jasperson worked more than four years before he perfected his compound. He completed his work about a year ago. He persuaded a paper manufacturer at Kalamazoo, Mich., to make a test. The result was a success. A few weeks ago the mill of the Combined Locks Paper Company made one run of the Jasperson paper. It was used in the publication of the Neenah paper, and the result was a paper firm, white, and of excellent quality.

In this process the old newspapers are put into the heater, or mixing machine, and a chemical added. By this the lampblack is extracted and the paper pulp is bleached clear white. The mass is washed several times before it is run through the rolls, from which it comes, dried by heat, in a fine white sheet, and is rolled on a spool for use. The same machinery is used. The inventor has received a patent from the United States. A mill is being equipped at Chicago, where his processes will be used.

OLD-FASHIONED FOODS

Considering the subject of cheap foods that are good, the Kansas City Times says:

The average housewife, traveling in a rut, thinks she must have Irish potatoes on the table, no matter what they cost. If when she went to school she had been taught the food values in different things, and was watching the market now, she would know that sweet potatoes, costing only one-half as much as Irish potatoes, have just as much food value, with a saving of $1 a bushel. A good cook book would teach her how to make sweet potato pie, to roast with the skin on, to bake, to cut in strips and fry, to boil and to cook in other ways.

She should moreover, according to this authority, know that there is just as much nutriment in corn meal as in wheat flour, and though the former may have doubled in price, it is still cheaper than the latter. Continuing, the Times calls attention to another wholesome food, a food that was in every home in the old days, but which is almost wholly neglected now, namely, molasses, either sorghum or cane, which could be found on every table a generation ago. This "sweetening" is still cheaper than sugar, and some of the authorities on food values do not hesitate to assert that it is more nourishing than butter. Indeed, in old times, it was used in preference to butter in many families, particularly by the children. Potatoes, corn bread spread with molasses, and molasses gingerbread with which the top off—such food, as the Times recalls it, was good enough for the stalwart men and women pioneers of the country. We have been and are living in an age of extravagance, and it will require a long campaign of education to get the people back to plain food without trimmings.

A GOOD WIFE

"She was a good wife to me. A good wife, God bless her." These words were spoken in trembling accents over a coffin lid. The woman asleep there had borne the heat and burden of life's long day, and no one had ever heard her murmur; her hand was quick to reach out in a helping grasp to those who fell by the wayside; and her feet were swift on errands of mercy: the heart of the husband had trusted her; he had left her to long hours of solitude, while he amused himself in scenes in which she had no pleasure nor part. Children had been born to them. She had reared them almost alone—they were gone! Her hand had ministered to their wants. Then she had comforted him, and sent him out strong and whole-hearted while she stayed at home and—cried. What can a woman do but cry—and trust?

Well, she is at rest now. But she could not die until she had promised to "bear up" and not to fret, but to remember how happy they had been. They? Yes, it is even so. For she was blest in giving, and he in receiving. It was an equal partnership after all. "She was a good wife to me." Oh man! man! why not have told her so, when her ears were not dulled by death?

A Child's Idea

A little girl said to her older sister the other day, "I wish I could sit up until after twelve o'clock some night." On being asked why she wanted to sit up so late, she promptly replied, "Well, after twelve o'clock the plates, and the clock, and the chairs and the knives and the forks all talk with each other and have a good time, and I want to hear them." The little girl's sister immediately inquired who ever put that notion into her head when she simply replied, "I read that in my book at school and it didn't begin with 'Once upon a time,' so I know it is true."

All hail the sweet potato which today is selling for less money per pound than its white brother and which, from the present outlook, is about the only article of food that will be found on the Thanksgiving table this year that by its continued low cost will prompt the consumer to give thanks.

Coal is High And They Say it May Go Higher

The Answer is—Burn SOCONY KEROSENE

A gallon of SOCONY Kerosene costs from 10 to 15 cents. Burned in a Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, it will provide ten hours of clean, odorless heat—more than enough to warm comfortably any ordinary room. There's small comfort in 10 or 15 cents worth of coal these days.

A Perfection Oil Heater is on when you want it and off when you don't.

But the furnace keeps right on merrily burning up the dollars whether you want it or not!

You can't put it out with a turn of the wrist—as you can a Perfection Oil Heater.

You can't light it in a jiffy if there comes a cold snap—as you can a Perfection Oil Heater.

The Perfection is solid, substantial, self-respecting—it doesn't smoke, smell or get out of order—or dirty up the house with ashes. It is as inexpensive to buy as it is to use.

SOCONY heat is clean heat. See that your dealer delivers SOCONY Kerosene and you won't have any trouble with your lamps, stoves and heaters.

SOCONY Kerosene is the trademarked name of the Standard Oil Company of New York's best grade of refined oil. See that you get SOCONY and no other. Look for the SOCONY Sign at your grocer's.

NOTES

(Watch this Column)

Norway, Nov. 1.

Of course you want some portrait work for Christmas. This month is the best time for sittings, besides you can save a little money because all photo materials cost us more, making it necessary to advance our portrait prices Dec. 4.

We are making a new size for only $1.00 per dozen this month.

Have you thought this about your Christmas plans, that your friends can buy anything you can give them—except your photograph?

You do not have to trust a valued picture to an agent when you want a crayon or water color portrait.

We can serve you perfectly in any kind of copy from old pictures—or from new.

Our old customers will be glad to know that Harry Lasselle is again at the studio after serving in the second regiment on the border.

HALL & COLE

Optometrists and Opticians

To those who cannot come to the office either on account of poor health or age, we will be pleased to call on them. Drop us a postal and we will call and fit you with glasses that you can see with.

Careful attention given to the care of children's eyes. No glasses prescribed unless positively needed.

We recommend Kryptok bifocal for far and near sight.
